Project uniqueness from Existing Solutions

Existing Solution	Proposed Solution
We need to trust intermediary [ third party] to store our health records	Third parties can be eliminated by establishing a distributed ledger which has built in trust mechanism [ blockchain]
Cost per transaction is very high as lot of intermediaries are involved.	Reduces transaction costs due to disintermediation , as well as near-real time processing.
No standard method for Patient identity	Uses Private and public keys identifiers which creates a singular, more secure method of protecting patient identity
No health data interoperability between systems	Shared data enables real-time updates across the network to all parties
Limited Access to health data	Distributed, secure access to patient health data across the distributed ledger

Professor in CSE, Presentation

Encryption

Transactons contain encrypted and digitally signed data along with an index that points to the prior block in the blockchain. Transactions are structured into blocks and recorded in chronological order.

Why Data Visualization is important?

- It provides a quick and effective way to communicate information in a universal manner using Visual information.
- Ability to absorb information quickly, improve insights, make faster decisions
- In business, it can also help businesses to identify which factors will affect customer's behavior, pinpoint to the areas which need to be improved or need more attention.
- As per the MIT source, 90% of the information transmitted to our human brain is visual. The human brain can process visuals 60000 times faster than text.

INTRODUCTION

SCRUM

Scrum is an iterative framework for managing work. It is a framework for managing work that is complex and changing. It is a framework for managing work that is complex and changing. It is a framework for managing work that is complex and changing.

Some key practices include:

- self-organizing and cross-functional teams
- time-boxed iteration of work known as Sprints, once a day
- daily stand-up meeting with specific questions
- daily 30-second daily Scrum
- demo to external stakeholders at end of each iteration
- each iteration starts with a specific planning
